Why candidates need to plan for success in a potential job

Candidates should figure out before an interview what their game plan is to succeed in the job they want, career adviser Lisa Quast suggests. She offers an example of how candidates can use a job description to map out their approach to the position. "Once you've completed your game plan, print out a few copies and bring it with you to your job interview. You'll impress the hiring manager when you pull it out and review it with him or her," Quast advises. Forbes (6/23)
